

IMPORTANT BREAKTHROUGH

... propolis is proven scientifically, to help the human immune system...

Sudi Lee Flynn's Bee Farms

WE are delighted to announce that we now have new propolis capsules in stock. These capsules are made from a highly concentrated extract of propolis, so they will be just as effective as the original pure propolis capsules. We have been working on these since January 1994, and the tests, carried out under strict EC guidelines, show that they still contain all the important active ingredients, as gathered by the bees, and they also meet the very strict government food regulations. It has taken us quite some time to produce these improved capsules, as there is a great difficulty with processing natural foods, so that they meet the required food standards, but also remain as effective as they are in their raw, natural state. To do this we have enlisted the help of Danish, Swedish and American chemists, who are experts in their field.

It may also interest you to know, that recent medical trials have been conducted at the National Heart and Lung Institute, in London, using these types of propolis extracts. The trials have shown very exciting results for the world of medical research, and we have supplied propolis for further testing to the Blackie Foundation Trust, so that we may further examine the great benefits propolis has on the human immune system. Of course, due to advertising laws, we are unable to disclose the trial results ourselves, or describe fully the specific disease and bacteria that propolis is effective against. However, you may wish to find out that information for yourselves, from public libraries, etc., or come and view the thousands of letters we have from users who have found propolis beneficial for many different things. But bear this in mind - propolis is proven, scientifically to help the human immune system. All illnesses are in some way connected with the immune system, and propolis, being as it is completely natural and has no know side-effects, is worth trying for any problem.

We believe, as do many professors and doctors from around the world who have studied propolis, that the bees have given us a natural balance to counteract the bacteria which is also given to us by nature. Unlike conventional antibiotics, propolis does not damage our own immune system, and its make up alters from season to season, according to the vegetation available to the bees. However, conventional medicines, as they are man-made, do not change, and it is a known fact that bacteria, which also changes, can develop a resistance and become more powerful than the medicine. We can only assume that this is why more, new 'mutant-bugs' become prevalent. The only way to deal with them is to counteract them with another, more powerful natural substance. Propolis fits this description, and we think it is food for thought.

Those of you who have been using propolis for some time will already know of the benefits, and we would like to thank you for sharing your experience with us, and we hope you will continue to do so. The support we have received from many of you, has given us the will to continue to keep up with our work, despite the many bureaucratic bomb-shells we have had to deal with.

The extraction method, we are now using, concentrates all soluble and active compounds from the propolis, leaving behind only insoluble fibrous and inert matter (resin). It ensures a pure and easily absorbable concentrate, free of dirt, bacteria and contaminants, eg. heavy metals. This means that these capsules may be even more beneficial than before, as they are more easily absorbed into the body.

Please be aware that we do not make these capsules for anyone other than our own customers, they are not available from health food shops or other propolis suppliers as we wish to keep the costs down for those in need. We only mention this as it has come to our attention that others are using our good name to promote their own propolis products, many of which are now so dilute, to meet government regulations, that in our opinion do not contain enough of the vital elements that make it effective.

We wish you good health, and hope you will help us to spread the word so that others in need may also benefit from this marvellous natural health-aid.

It is good for arthritis, rheumatism, ME and MS, etc., etc. Flynn's Bee Farms have been in business since 1973. Over 1,000 letters are available for your perusal. Propolis stimulates the immune system so can be used for a wide range of illnesses.
