BEE SNIPPET: Many of you will start to see Bumblebees emerging from hibernation looking for a new nesting site. They often hover very low to the ground, looking for old mouse holes or plant-root systems in which to set up home and start rearing young. Old bird nesting boxes, upturned plant pots and underneath decking and shed bases are some of the favourites. Bumblebees are non-aggressive, and do a lot of pollinating. They are fascinating to watch, and families can live alongside them and find them very educational. It is wise to keep children & pets away as they may sting if disturbed. They ARE a protected species and MUST NOT be killed or harmed in any way. If you see an exhausted, drowsy Bumblebee, you can feed it a few drops of honey or sugary water. You will see its tongue come out, and it will be instantly revived!

The Pampered Chef Cooking with Honey fund raiser was a great success. 15% of sales will go to our local bee breeding charity. Terry Clare president of international charity BIBBA (Bee Improvement & Bee Breeders Association) is very pleased. Thank you to everyone involved and don't worry if you missed it, we will be holding similar events in the future.
